
Farideh Farhi is an Independent Scholar and Affiliate Graduate Faculty at the University of Hawai’i at Manoa. She has taught comparative politics at the University of Colorado, Boulder, University of Hawai’i, University of Tehran, and Shahid Beheshti University, Tehran. Her publications include States and Urban-Based Revolutions in Iran and Nicaragua (University of Illinois Press) and numerous articles and book chapters on comparative analyses of revolutions and Iranian politics. She has been a recipient of grants from the United States Institute of Peace and the Rockefeller Foundation and was most recently a Public Policy Scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars. Farhi has also worked as a consultant for the World Bank and the International Crisis Group.

Thomas E. Graham joined Kissinger Associates, Inc., as a Senior Director in 2007. He was Special Assistant to the President and Senior Director for Russia on the National Security Council Staff from March 2004-February 2007 and Director for Russian Affairs on the National Security Council Staff from June 2002-February 2004. From August 2001-May 2002, he served as the Associate Director of the Policy Planning Staff of the Department of State. From 1998-2001, Graham was a senior associate in the Russia/Eurasia program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. His articles have appeared in the New York Times, Washington Post, and Wall Street Journal, and in European and Russian publications. From 1984-1998, he was a Foreign Service Officer. His assignments included two tours of duty at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, where he served as head of the political/internal unit and acting political counselor. Between tours in Moscow, he worked on Russian and Soviet affairs on the Policy Planning Staff of the Department of State and as a policy assistant in the Office of the Undersecretary of Defense for Policy. Graham received a Ph.D. in political science from Harvard University and a B.A. in Russian studies from Yale University.
Jim Hoagland is a Contributing Editor for The Washington Post, writing on foreign affairs in occasional columns that focus on the major questions and issues facing national security and foreign affairs policymakers. Hoagland joined The Post in 1966 as a metropolitan reporter. He was assigned in 1969 to Nairobi as The Post's Africa correspondent and in 1972 to Beirut as Middle East correspondent. A tour in Paris as West Europe correspondent preceded his becoming The Post's foreign editor in 1979. He began writing his column in 1986 in Europe, chronicling the gradual fall of Communism in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. In 2002, the editors of The Times of London, Le Figaro, Die Welt, and four other leading European newspapers headed a jury that awarded Hoagland the Cernobbio-Europa Prize. He was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in 1971 for International Reporting and in 1991 for Commentary. Born in Rock Hill, S.C., Hoagland graduated cum laude from the University of South Carolina and later did graduate work at the University of Aix-en-Provence in France and at Columbia University in New York.

Andrew C. Kuchins is a senior fellow and director of the CSIS Russia and Eurasia Program. He is an internationally renowned expert on Russian foreign and domestic policies who publishes widely and is frequently called on by business, government, media, and academic leaders for comment and consulting on Russian and Eurasian affairs. His recent publications include The Key to Success in Afghanistan: A Modern Silk Road Strategy, coauthored with S. Fred Starr (Central Asia–Caucasus Institute, May 2010), Russia after the Global Economic Crisis, co-edited with Anders Aslund and Sergei Guriev (Peterson Institute, June 2010), “The Speeding Troika” (Russia Beyond the Headlines, September 2010), and “Keep on Truckin’” (Foreign Policy, October 2010). Kuchins currently teaches at Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) and has also taught at Georgetown and Stanford Universities. He holds a B.A. from Amherst College and an M.A. and Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins SAIS.

David Michael Lampton is Dean of Faculty, George and Sadie Hyman Professor, and Director of China Studies at the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies. He also is consultant to the Kettering Foundation and the law firm of Akin Gump. Before assuming those posts he was president of the National Committee on United States-China Relations in New York City from 1988-1997. From May 1998 to May 2006 he also was affiliated with The Nixon Center as the founding director of its Chinese Studies Program. Lampton is the author of numerous books and articles on Chinese domestic and foreign affairs, with more popular articles appearing in Foreign Affairs, Time Magazine (Asia), Foreign Policy, The National Interest, The New York Times, The Washington Post, International Herald Tribune, The Christian Science Monitor, and The Asian Wall Street Journal. He has testified before Senate and House committees of the US Congress and appeared on Frontline, Moneyline with Lou Dobbs, The Diane Rehm Show, The Kojo Nnamdi Show, NPR’s “All Things Considered,” The O’Reilly Factor, CNN, NPR, VOA radio and television, among others. He specializes in Chinese domestic politics and leadership, Chinese foreign policy, the policy–making process, and U.S.–China relations.

Saideh Lotfian is Associate Professor of Political Science and Associate Dean for Research at the Faculty of Law and Political Science at the University of Tehran. She was formerly Deputy Director of the Center for Middle East Strategic Studies in Tehran (1996-2002), and Visiting Iranian Fellow at St. Antony’s College, Oxford University (2003). She has been a member of the Pugwash Council since 2002 and is currently the chair of the Council. She received her Ph.D. from Michigan State University in political science.

Daniel Markey is senior fellow for India, Pakistan, and South Asia at the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), where he specializes in security and governance issues in South Asia. From 2003 to 2007, Markey held the South Asia portfolio on the Secretary’s Policy Planning Staff at the U.S. Department of State. Prior to government service, he taught in the Department of Politics at Princeton University, where he served as executive director of Princeton’s Research Program in International Security. Earlier, he was a postdoctoral fellow at Harvard’s Olin Institute for Strategic Studies. Markey recently served as project director of the CFR-sponsored Independent Task Force on U.S. Strategy in Pakistan and Afghanistan, which was co-chaired by former deputy secretary of state Richard L. Armitage and former national security advisor Samuel R. Berger. He is the author of numerous articles, including the January 2010 CFR contingency planning memorandum, “Terrorism and Indo-Pakistani Escalation,” the June 2009 Asia Policy article, “Developing India’s Foreign Policy Software,” and the August 2008 Council Special Report, Securing Pakistan’s Tribal Belt. Markey earned a bachelor’s degree in international studies from the Johns Hopkins University and a doctorate in politics from Princeton University.

Walter Russell Mead is the James Clarke Chace Professor of Foreign Affairs and Humanities at Bard College and Editor-at-Large of The American Interest. Until 2011, he was also a Brady-Johnson Distinguished Fellow in Grand Strategy at Yale, where he had taught in the Yale International Security Studies Program since 2008. His book, Special Providence: American Foreign Policy and How It Changed the World (Alfred A. Knopf, 2001), was widely hailed by reviewers, historians, and diplomats as an important study that will change the way Americans and others think about American foreign policy. Among several honors and prizes, Special Providence received the Lionel Gelber Award for best book in English on international relations in 2002. Mead writes regularly on international affairs for many of the world’s leading publications. He serves as a regular reviewer of books on American history and foreign policy for Foreign Affairs and frequently contributes articles and review essays to the journal. He appears often on national and international radio and television programs. In 1997, he was a finalist for the National Magazine Award in the category of essays and criticism. Prior to his current positions at Bard and The American Interest, Mead was a fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations in New York City between 1997 and 2010, serving as the Henry A. Kissinger Senior Fellow for U.S. Foreign Policy from 2003 until his departure. He is a founding board member of the New America Foundation.

Evan S. Medeiros is China director at the National Security Council. Previously he was a senior political scientist at the RAND Corporation in the Washington, D.C. office, where he specialized in the international politics of East Asia, China’s foreign and national security policy, U.S.-China relations and Chinese defense industrial issues. He was also an International Affairs Fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations. He holds a Ph.D. in International Relations from the London School of Economics and Political Science, an M.Phil in International Relations from the University of Cambridge, where he was a Fulbright Scholar, an M.A. in China Studies from the University of London’s School of Oriental and African Studies, and a B.A. in analytic philosophy from Bates College. Medeiros is fluent in Mandarin Chinese.

Deepa M. Ollapally is Associate Director of the Sigur Center for Asian Studies and Research Professor of International Affairs at the Elliott School of International Affairs, The George Washington University. She holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from Columbia University. She is the recipient of grants from the Ford Foundation, the Asia Foundation, and the Rockefeller Foundation. Her research areas include Asian regional security; comparative politics of South Asia; Indian foreign policy; U.S.-India relations; and identity politics and the international system. Her most recent book is The Politics of Extremism in South Asia, published by Cambridge University Press, 2008. She also published the book Confronting Conflict: Domestic Factors and U.S. Policymaking in the Third World. She has published articles in numerous journals including Foreign Affairs, Political Science Quarterly and Asian Survey. She previously directed the South Asia program at the U.S. Institute of Peace and was an Associate Professor of Political Science at Swarthmore College. She was a Fellow and Head at the International and Strategic Studies Program at the National Institute of Advanced Studies in Bangalore, India. She is a frequent commentator in the media and has appeared on BBC, CNN, NPR, VOA and the Diane Rehm Show.

Thomas R. Pickering is Vice Chairman at Hills and Company, which provides advice and counsel to a number of major US enterprises. He retired as Senior Vice President for International Relations and a member of the Executive Council of The Boeing Company in 2006. Prior to joining Boeing, Ambassador Pickering served as U.S. Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs from 1997 to 2001. In a diplomatic career spanning five decades, he was U.S. Ambassador to the Russian Federation, India, Israel, El Salvador, Nigeria, and the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan. From 1989 to 1992, he was Ambassador and Representative to the United Nations in New York. He also served as Executive Secretary of the Department of State and Special Assistant to Secretaries William P. Rogers and Henry A. Kissinger from 1973 to 1974. Pickering entered on active duty in the U.S. Navy from 1956-1959, and later served in the Naval Reserve to the grade of Lieutenant Commander. In 1983 and in 1986, Pickering won the Distinguished Presidential Award and, in 1996, the Department of State’s highest award – the Distinguished Service Award. He is a member of the International Institute of Strategic Studies and the Council on Foreign Relations. He speaks French, Spanish and Swahili and has some fluency in Arabic, Hebrew and Russian.

Rajesh Rajagopalan is Professor, Centre for International Politics, Organization and Disarmament (CIPOD), School of International Studies (SIS), Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi. Previously, he was Senior Fellow at the Observer Research Foundation, New Delhi, and Research Fellow at the Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses, New Delhi. He also served as Deputy Secretary in the National Security Council Secretariat, Government of India (2000-2001). His areas of research interest are international relations theory, military doctrines, counterinsurgency and nuclear weapons and disarmament. His publications include two books, Second Strike: Arguments about Nuclear War in South Asia (New Delhi: Penguin/Viking, 2005), and Fighting Like A Guerrilla: The Indian Army and Counterinsurgency (New Delhi, India and Abingdon, U.K.: Routledge, 2008). His articles (some jointly authored) have appeared in a number of academic journals such as The Washington Quarterly, Contemporary Security Policy, India Review, Contemporary South Asia, Small Wars and Insurgencies, South Asia, South Asian Survey, and Strategic Analysis as well as in Indian newspapers such as The Hindu, Indian Express, Financial Express, and Hindustan Times.

Ren Xiao, currently on leave and based at the Chinese Embassy in Japan, was until recently Professor and Associate Dean at the Institute of International Studies (IIS), Fudan University, Shanghai, China. He is also the Director of the Center for Chinese Foreign Policy Studies at IIS. In that capacity, in partnership with China’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs, he founded the Diplomat-in-Residence Program at Fudan, the first of its kind in the Chinese institutions of higher learning. Previously he was Senior Fellow and Director of the Asia Pacific Studies Department, Shanghai Institute for International Studies (SIIS). Before joining SIIS in 2002, he taught at Fudan University’s Department of International Politics from 1992 to 2002 as lecturer (1992-96), associate professor (1996-2001) and professor (2001-02). Ren studied in the University of Essex in England (1990-91) and held research or visiting positions at the University of Turku, Finland, Nagoya University, Japan, and The George Washington University in Washington, DC, U.S.A. His research concentrates on international political theory, international relations of the Asia-Pacific, Northeast Asian security, and Chinese foreign policy. He received his Ph.D. in political science from Fudan University in 1992.

Richard Samuels is Ford International Professor of Political Science and director of the Center for International Studies at MIT. He has been head of the MIT Political Science Department, Vice-Chair of the Committee on Japan of the National Research Council, and chair of the Japan-US Friendship Commission. He has also been elected to the American Academy of Arts & Sciences. His most recent book, Securing Japan: Tokyo’s Grand Strategy and the Future of East Asia, was a finalist for the Lionel Gelber Prize for the best book in international affairs. Machiavelli’s Children won the Marraro Prize from the Society for Italian Historical Studies and the Jervis-Schroeder Prize from the International History and Politics section of American Political Science Association. Earlier books were awarded prizes from the Association for Asian Studies, the Association of American University Press, and the Ohira Memorial Prize. His articles have appeared in Foreign Affairs, International Security, International Organization, Journal of Modern Italian Studies, National Interest, Journal of Japanese Studies, and Daedalus.

David E. Sanger is Chief Washington Correspondent for The New York Times and is one of the newspaper's senior writers. In a 28-year career at the paper, he has reported from New York, Tokyo and Washington, specializing in foreign policy, national security and the politics of globalization. He is also the author of the New York Times best-seller The Inheritance: The World Obama Confronts and the Challenges to American Power, (2009) based on his seven years as the Times’ White House correspondent, covering two wars, the confrontations with Iran, North Korea and other rogue states, and America’s efforts to deal with the rise of China. Twice he has been a member of Times reporting teams that won the Pulitzer Prize. In 2010, Mr. Sanger was also appointed adjunct professor of public policy at the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard, where he is also a non-resident visiting scholar. Mr. Sanger appears regularly on public affairs and news shows, including Washington Week on PBS, and the three main Sunday news shows, Face the Nation, Meet the Press and This Week. He also delivers the weekly Washington Report on WQXR, part of New York Public Radio. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and the Aspen Strategy Group.

Michael Schiffer is the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for East Asia in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Asian and Pacific Security Affairs. Mr. Schiffer came to the Office of the Secretary of Defense in April of 2009 from the Stanley Foundation where he was a program officer in Policy Analysis and Dialogue responsible for the foundation's Asia programs as well as a range of other US national and global security issues from 2006-2009. From 2004-2005 he was a Council on Foreign Relations Hitachi International Affairs Fellow in Japan. From 1995-2004, Schiffer worked on the staff of US Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA), where he was her senior national security adviser and legislative director. Prior to that, he was director of International Security Programs at New York University's Center for War, Peace, and the News Media and also managed a bed and breakfast inn in Hawaii. Schiffer is a Center for Asia and Pacific Studies Fellow at the University of Iowa and has published widely on a range of international security, political and media issues. He received his undergraduate degree from Georgetown University and graduate degrees from the London School of Economics and New York University.
David Shambaugh has been Professor of Political Science & International Affairs in the Elliott School of International Affairs at The George Washington University since 1996. He directed the Elliott School’s Sigur Center for Asian Studies from 1996-98, and since that time has been the founding Director of the China Policy Program. He has also been a Nonresident Senior Fellow in the Foreign Policy Studies Program and Center for Northeast Asian Policy Studies at The Brookings Institution since 1998. In 2008 he was also appointed an Honorary Research Professor at the Shanghai Academy of Social Sciences, and during 2009-2010 was a Senior Fulbright Research Scholar at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences Institute of Economics & Politics in Beijing. Professor Shambaugh has published widely on China’s domestic politics, foreign relations, military and security, and the international relations of Asia—having authored or edited 25 books, over 200 articles, book chapters, and opinion-editorials (op-eds), and book reviews. He is a frequent commentator on Chinese and Asian affairs in the international media, sits on the editorial boards of a number of scholarly journals, and has served as a consultant to various governments, research institutes, and private corporations. He is currently completing a book entitled China Goes Global: Wealth in Search of Power & Influence.

Gary Sick served on the National Security Council staff under Presidents Ford, Carter and Reagan. He was the principal White House aide for Iran during the Iranian Revolution and the hostage crisis and is the author of two books on U.S.-Iran relations, in addition to several other edited books and articles dealing with U.S. Middle East policy. He was the deputy director for International Affairs at the Ford Foundation from 1982 to 1987, where he was responsible for programs relating to U.S. foreign policy. Sick has a Ph.D. in political science from Columbia University, where he is Senior Research Scholar, adjunct professor of international affairs, and former director of the Middle East Institute (2000-2003). He teaches in the School of International and Public Affairs, where he was voted one of the top five teachers in 2009. He is a member (emeritus) of the board of Human Rights Watch in New York and founding chair of its advisory committee on the Middle East and North Africa. He is the executive director of Gulf/2000, an international online research project on political, economic and security developments in the Persian Gulf, being conducted at Columbia University since 1993 with support from a number of major foundations.

Barbara Slavin is an expert on U.S. foreign policy and the author of a 2007 book on Iran entitled "Bitter Friends, Bosom Enemies: Iran, the U.S. and the Twisted Path to Confrontation.” A nonresident senior fellow at The Atlantic Council specializing on Iran, Ms. Slavin is also a contributor to AOLNews.com and Foreignpolicy.com among other media outlets. Ms. Slavin was Assistant Managing Editor for World and National Security of The Washington Times in 2008-09. Prior to that, she served for 12 years as senior diplomatic reporter for USA TODAY where she covered such key issues as the U.S.-led war on terrorism and in Iraq, policy toward "rogue" states and the Arab-Israeli conflict. She accompanied three secretaries of State on their official travels and also reported solo from Iran, Libya, Israel, Egypt, North Korea, Russia, China, Saudi Arabia and Syria. Ms. Slavin, who has lived in Russia, China, Japan and Egypt, is a regular commentator on U.S. foreign policy on National Public Radio, the Public Broadcasting System and C-Span. She wrote her book on Iran, which she has visited seven times, as a public policy scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in 2006 and spent October 2007-July 2008 as senior fellow at the U.S. Institute of Peace, where she researched and wrote a report on Iranian regional influence, entitled “Mullahs, Money and Militias: How Iran Exerts Its Influence in the Middle East.”
Sheila A. Smith, an expert on Japanese politics and foreign policy, is senior fellow for Japan studies at the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR). She directed CFR’s “New Regional Security Architecture for Asia Program” and currently leads a project on “China and India as Emerging Powers: Challenge or Opportunity for the United States and Japan?” Smith joined CFR from the East-West Center in 2007, where she specialized in Asia-Pacific international relations and U.S. policy toward Asia. She was also recently affiliated with Keio University in Tokyo, where she researched and wrote on Japan’s foreign policy toward China and the Northeast Asian region on an Abe Fellowship. From 2004 to 2007, she directed a multinational research team in a cross-national study of the domestic politics of the U.S. military presence in Japan, South Korea, and the Philippines. Among her publications are Shifting Terrain: The Domestic Politics of the U.S. Military in Asia, East-West Center Special Report No. 8 (East-West Center, 2006), “A Place Apart: Okinawa in Japan’s Postwar Peace” in Partnership: The United States and Japan, 1951-2001 (Kodansha International, 2001); and Local Voices, National Issues: Local Initiative in Japanese Policymaking (University of Michigan Press, 2000). Dr. Smith earned her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the Department of Political Science at Columbia University.

Igor Zevelev holds a Doctor of Sciences degree in political science from the Institute of International Relations and World Economy (IMEMO) in Moscow, where he served as Head of Department and Deputy Director at the Center for Developing Countries. He has held visiting professorships at Macalester College, the University of California at Berkeley, San Jose State University, and the University of Washington, and taught for five years at the George C. Marshall European Center for Security Studies in Germany. He also served as Washington Bureau Chief for the RIA Novosti News and Information Agency for three years. He has published five books and numerous articles on Russian national identity, foreign policy, and diasporas.